Drale Wants Youth Employment Program

Establishment of a youth employment program which would provide state sponsored programs for boys between the ages of 16 and 20 was called for this week by Nickolas O. Drale, Torrance City Councilman and a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the Assembly from the 7th District. Drale said such a program could be patterned after the federal CCC program of the 1930s, and that the youths could be used throughout California in a battle against the hazards of nature which in the case of forest fires has cost the citizens of California millions of dollars.

could be housed in idle military camps and in community armories," Drale said. their lives when they are out of school and waiting for military service. "Employment is hard to find for youths of this age," Drale commented. "However, these youths have great energies and we should seek ways to put it to constructive use—and to give them a chance to get away from the streets and hangouts which breed delinquency problems." At the same time, such a program could provide California with a wealth of facilities in its public resources and recreation areas at a reasonable cost to the taxpayer, Drale said.

L. Harvey Saluted by Colleagues

A tribute to leadership was made Monday night as Leo M. Harvey, founder and chairman of Harvey Aluminum, was saluted by long time employees at a surprise testimonial dinner at the Ambassador Hotel.

The four hundred attending the affair, made up of employees with ten or more years of service, toasted their "Mr. Leo" in grateful appreciation of 50 years of wisdom and leadership.

To commemorate the event, a permanent bronze portrait of the industrialist, sculptured by Joseph D. Portanova, was unveiled to express the sentiments of the senior personnel—some with a 30 years continuous work record, many rising from minor jobs to managerial positions.

Immigrating to the United States in 1907, Leo M. Harvey founded the company in 1914 in Los Angeles. Today, the publicly held corporation is the fifth largest primary aluminum producer in the United States and a major supplier of titanium, zirconium, and special metals, with plants and branches throughout the country and operations overseas.

"IT IS MY suggestion that our youths be given an opportunity to enter such a state sponsored program for a period of six-months or longer. A summer program of three months could be arranged for young men attending school who wanted summer employment," Drale said. He suggested that those entering the program be paid the minimum legal wage with cost of upkeep deducted. "In many areas of California, youths in such a program
